Introduction

The Song Index of the Enoch Pratt Free Library is a long-term project of the Library's Fine Arts Department. It dates from the early twentieth century, with various librarians taking responsibility for indexing the song books as they arrived in the department. The index grew, at times haphazardly, until the late 1970s, with some control, but little editing. At that time it was noticed how heavily the index was used, and the librarian began to institute rules over what information was entered and how. It continued to expand, as it was put into an electronic database, to about 160,000 entries. This book is the outgrowth of that file.

The Enoch Pratt Free Library has a large collection of song books, upon which this Index is based. Every type of song book is collected, including all types of anthologies, school song books, hymnals, single composer, and multiple composers. There are also collections of songs in languages which include African, European, Native American, and Asian. Other anthologies include novelty songs, folk and popular songs, show tunes, children's songs, advertising, protest, and songs of all religions. There are also collections of classical songs including arias from operas and selections from oratorios, symphonies and other larger works.

The Song Index is a finding guide for songs of all types. It is not intended as a history of songs or a complete guide to composers or other information. Most of the books indexed herein are owned by the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore, Maryland. This collection of song books is important because of its wide scope.

The variety of songs available makes the collection useful to every type of musician, amateur and professional. While the Library does not collect every song book, it does attempt to collect every type of anthology. It is important to note that this index includes only songs found in books, not single signature music. In indexing the song books, it became necessary to define "song" in a more general way than the usual "words and music." For example, if a song book contained both songs and instrumental pieces, the latter were not omitted. With demand for popular themes, such as "The Love Theme from St. Elmo's Fire," this made sense. However, books with only instrumental pieces were not included.

Songs are a significant part of many people's lives. Meanings and memories can be attached to them which are deeply personal. For performers, finding just the right song can be important. For weddings, funerals, and other occasions, songs can be a source of celebration and comfort. The intent of this book is to join people with the songs they seek.

Acknowledgments

It is literally impossible to thank everyone involved in the creation of this book. The librarian who began the index is unknown, and the librarians who have worked on it through the decades remain anonymous.

However, the following people have helped tremendously in the recent history and deserve my deepest appreciation: Alprescia Rivers, Ruth Sundermeyer, Natalie Haskins and Daria Phair. Also very important to the project were Elaine Bradtke, Margaret Earickson, Marta Giles, James K. Dickson, Joseph Viviano, Jiton Davidson and especially the late Rita Hollins.

Special thanks go to Joan Stahl, who upon my request assigned the song index to me. Thanks also to John Sondheim, to Carla Hayden, who has been extraordinarily supportive, and to Averil Kadis for her advice. Special thanks to Jana Korman for her patience in editing and proofreading, and to Jeffrey Korman for lugging all those song books back and forth. I am also grateful to Barbara Glassmyer and Gordon Krabbe for the help on the financial and business side of the project.

Wayne Stoler of Letter Perfect has demonstrated great skill and patience in creating the electronic database from which this book was developed.

For their emotional support over a very long haul, my parents, siblings, and nieces and nephews have been wonderful. This book is dedicated to one of those nephews, who unfortunately will never see it.

Financial support for this project was contributed by the late Mrs. Henry A. Rosenberg of the Henry and Ruth Blaustein Rosenberg Foundation, Inc., by the late Lester Levy and the late Katherine Conger.

And finally, thank you Leo Balk and Marie Ellen Larcada, the editors at Garland Publishing, who have waited years for this, and only rarely sounded impatient.

How to Use This Book

The arrangement of the Index is alphabetical by title of the song. Each entry contains the song title, the name of the composer in parentheses, alternative titles which might also be checked, and the bibliography number of each book in which the song can be found.

The Bibliography is in alphabetical order by either the editor of the book, or if there is no editor, by the title. It gives publishing information for each book listed, with each listing numbered. If Library no longer owns the book, the entry is accompanied by an OCLC number. Readers who do not have access to the OCLC library computer network should contact their local library. There are also some books that might not be completely indexed. These are marked with an asterisk (*).

The Composer Index contains two types of entries. Over the years in which this Index was compiled, the first names of the composers were often omitted. Where the editor was able to identify individual composers, the full name is listed with those songs. However, many of the entries list the last name only.

The Source Index lists larger works from which the songs originated. These include not only stage and movie musicals, but also non-musicals which include songs, television shows, operas, oratorios, symphonies and other classical works, and any source which contains the song indexed.

To find a song, look for the bibliography number(s) next to each entry in the Index and find that number in the Bibliography. Once you have identified the song book needed, contact the local library, or the Enoch Pratt Free Library, Fine Arts Department, 400 Cathedral Street, Baltimore, Maryland 21201. The telephone number is (410) 396-5490. The fax number is (410) 396-1409. The Song Index has its own e-mail address, which is songs@mail.pratt.lib.md.us.
